HIGHER INCOME, GASOLINE TAX PLANNED BY U.S.

Funds Sought to Finance Program of Public Works

PROHIBITION LAW IS ALSO FACTOR

Taxes Would Be Dropped If Liquor Amendment Is Repealed

BY CECIL DICKSON.
(Copyright, 1933, By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Higher income and gasoline taxes to finance the public works program is the present decision of the house ways and means committee, with a majority also planning a provision for suspension of the new levies in event of prohibition repeal.

As revealed today in interviews with committee members, an impost on corporate stock dividends also will be effected toward financing the $3,300,000,000 public construction-employment bond issue.

Barring changes at the imminent sessions of the committee to draft the legislation, it will be provided that this too could be cast out of the window, if and when the required 30 states ratify repeal. There has been talk of March 15 next year figuring in the decision, that being the first day for payment of the projected new income tax rate.

Refer to Roosevelt Message

Anti-prohibition house members in their private discussion have dwelt much on President Roosevelt's Wednesday message to congress, in which he advocated provision for abandoning the new taxes upon repeal of the amendment and the Volstead act.

"The pre-prohibition revenue laws would then automatically go into effect," he pointed out, "and yield enough wholly to eliminate these temporary re-employment taxes."

In view of this, it appears likely either that a formidable congressional group will press for automatic dropping of the taxes under such conditions or to empower the administration to nullify them.

The sales tax has been thrust aside and it was disclosed today by interviews with both Republican and Democratic committee members, that in the absence of direct word from President Roosevelt no effort would be made to write that controversial form of taxation into the measure.

Huge Cold-Rolling Mill To Be Shipped Next Week; Engineers Inspect It

The world's largest cold-rolling mill, constructed at the plant of the E. W. Bliss company here, will be started next week to Gary, Ind., for use in a sheet and tin plate plant, it was announced today by officials of the Bliss company.

Following a public inspection yesterday at which several hundred persons viewed the mechanical giant, the mill is to be disassembled, starting tomorrow, and it will be shipped, as it is taken apart, to the Midwest plant.

Today, members of the Association of Iron and Steel Electrical Engineers from Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Chicago, Philadelphia and Birmingham districts were to inspect the big mill, have lunch at the Elks and attend a technical session in the high school auditorium at which Lloyd Jones, Bliss company manager, was scheduled to present a paper on "Cold Rolling Processes".

MOTHER OF TWO STILL MISSING

Search Extended for Mrs. Esther Labraolo; Daughter Ill

While an eight-year-old daughter lay sick at her home, 244 South Howard ave., crying for her mother, Mrs. Esther Labraolo, 26, police and relatives today entered on the tenth day of their search for the woman who disappeared from here Thursday, May 11.

"Come home, all is forgiven," is the plea directed at his wife by the husband, Adam Labraolo, who reported the illness of one of their two daughters to Police Chief Ralph Stoffer today.

"My daughters want her back and so do I," Labraolo told Stoffer.

Search Is Extended

Mr. and Mrs. Labraolo have two daughters, Elinor, eight, and Betty, five. Relatives are now caring for them at the Labraolo home while the search for the mother has been extended to cities in both Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Labraolo, telling police that she and her wife had no troubles and that he could not understand why she left, said she had completed spring house cleaning duties the day prior to her disappearance. She labored hard for ten days with work at home, Labraolo said.

She left the home at 1:30 p. m. ten days ago, informing her husband she had an engagement with a local dentist. Investigations later revealed that she never kept this engagement and she has not been seen in Salem since.

SURPRISE DONATION FROM W. H. MULLINS ESTATE AIDS TEAMS

$4,500 Gift Swells Workers' Pledges to $15,862 to Climax Two-Day Campaign; Shop Team Gives $1,600 to Fund

A generous citizenry once more has kept faith with its community, contributing cash and pledges totalling $15,862.32 to more than fill the chest quota in the annual Community fund campaign which was completed here Friday.

The philanthropy of the late William H. Mullins, industrialist, made possible the filling of the chest but great credit goes to the army of more than 100 civic workers who contributed their services during the two-day drive and themselves collected contributions totalling $11,362.32.

From the estate of Mr. Mullins, who died in March, 1932, came a surprise donation to the community fund of $4,500 to be apportioned between the Salem City hospital and the World War Memorial building.

Announcement of the bequest from the Mullins estate was made by Atty. L. P. Metzger, campaign manager, following the reports of eight team captains and other drive executives. A letter received Friday from the Union Trust company, Cleveland, by Metzger, revealed Mr. Mullins' contributions.

Disarmament Pact Is Believed Near; Geneva Optimistic

(By Associated Press)

GENEVA, May 20.—Disarmament hopes sprang up afresh today, with an agreement appearing nearer a reality.

The flow of optimism was attributed first to President Roosevelt's practical recommendations in his world message, then to the conciliatory speech of Chancellor Hitler before the Reichstag, and finally to the announcement that Germany accepts the British disarmament plan as the basis for an arms convention.

Rudolf Naddolny, spokesman for the German delegation, declared, "I hope this will be regarded as new proof of German moderation," when he announced the German acceptance yesterday.

His government, Naddolny said, will not contend for fundamental changes in the British plan, drafted by Premier Ramsay MacDonald, but "the German people maintain and demand that the conference produce two results—first, security by disarmament, of the heavily armed states, and second, achievement of equality rights for Germany."

So swiftly did events move, however, that some delegates said frankly they were fearful.

A spokesman for France and her allies announced they were waiting for Germany to put her assurances of collaboration into practical effect.

In announcing that employees in the shops had contributed $1,600 to the campaign, W. F. Bolen, captain of the shop team, reported that employment represented 47 per cent of a year ago, while pledges amounted to 62 per cent.

Earl S. Kerr, general chairman of the campaign, later repeated this announcement to emphasize it and to pay tribute to the spirit of the factory employees. Kerr also thanked the executives of the campaign, the team workers and the public for its hearty response.

Miss Elizabeth Horne, in charge of soliciting in public and parochial schools, reported total donations of $389.72 from the children. C. S. Carr announced that $400 had been pledged to the City hospital by residents of surrounding towns.

Team captains took occasion to thank their co-workers and brief talks were given by F. R. Pow and F. Troy Cope. In behalf of the executive committee L. P. Metzger presented Chairman Kerr with a hammer which he was asked to use as a ravel.

Selections by the High school sextet were enjoyed during the serving of the dinner.

VANISHED N. Y. BANKER HUNTED

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, May 20.—A belief that Joseph W. Harriman, vanished banker, might totter to the grave of a dead son to commit suicide led authorities to guard the grave closely today.

The aged and broken ex-chairman of the Harriman National Bank and Trust company hobbled out of a nursing home yesterday where he was awaiting trial on charges of falsifying the bank's accounts to the extent of $1,661,770.

The wording of six notes he left behind was kept secret by his attorney, George F. Lessor, but Lessor indicated Harriman apparently was bent on self-destruction.

The lawyer said that Harriman, who is 68, never recovered from the death in 1923 of Joseph W. Harriman, Jr., and that for some time he has been suffering from "acute and fatal" maladies of the heart and brain.

The grave that is being guarded is in Locust Valley cemetery, Long Island.

Police scrutinized all elderly, gray-haired men at ferry slips, railroad stations and along the waterfront in an intensive search.

The New York American said that Harriman, soon after he was let out of the nursing home with the remark that he was "going out for a moment," called at a barber shop nearby and had his hair clipped closely all over his head.

"A very unusual haircut," the barber, Alfred Rammacca, was quoted as saying.

WELCOME ENGINEERS

The E. W. Bliss company today is enacting the role of host to members of the Association of Iron and Steel Electrical Engineers, from five sections of the United States—
Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Chicago, Philadelphia and Birmingham.But the City of Salem itself takes almost as active an interest in the reception of the distinguished group as the manufacturers do, inasmuch as it climaxes an industrial achievement in which the city justly feels considerable pride.The visiting engineers today are inspecting the world's largest cold-rolling mill, produced at the plant of the Bliss company. Next week the mill, disassembled, will be shipped to a midwest sheet and tin plate plant to play its part in the development of a new economic era.The Bliss company and its product have attracted the attention of steel men throughout the United States. A number of new departures were recorded in the production of the mill, notably the use of steel forgings for the 250,000-pound hoistings instead of the customary castings, providing impetus for the "new-use-for-steel" movement launched by engineers last fall.While welded rolled steel has been used successfully in other machine construction, steel men express the belief that this is the largest piece of welded machinery of its type ever attempted. Its success will prove a great boon to the use of rolled steel and welding in the machinery field, affecting not only the steel industry but the electrical industry as well.It is estimated there is a potential market of several million tons annually of rolled steel shapes and plates for this purpose.

NATIONAL MANAGERSHIP

Americans need a comprehensive term to cover the power delegated to political authority in the national recovery bill. National manager-ship comes close to it.The scope of the legislation can be comprehended only by realizing the uproar which would have greeted it a year ago or six months ago.
While today it appears only an another phase of reconstruction, then it would have appeared as a radical alteration in the complexion of the entire order of life, which is what it is.In his inaugural address, President Roosevelt declared: "In the event that the national emergency is still critical . . . I shall ask the congress for . . . broad executive power to wage a war against the emergency as great as the power that would be given to me if we were in fact invaded by a foreign foe." The national recovery bill would give the President this power—greater than any executive ever sought in peace-times.In general terms, it would do two things. First, it would establish a comprehensive degree of managerial control in all branches and the means whereby political control can enforce its rules to the letter. It is partnership in one sense, but government will hold a balance of power, depending of course, upon industry's cooperation.The second purpose is to restore employment directly and indirectly with public works. In this division, too, the executive is given supreme authority. It will be his responsibility to decide and to administer.
He will be made, in a sense, the manager of national recovery.If the legislation works—it undoubtedly will be enacted—there will be a temporary termination of the favorite dogmas of capitalism and democracy. It is not too soon to speculate, incidentally, on where the United States will go when the national emergency is declared to haveended. If the provisions of the national recovery bill are found effective in restoring industry, will they be effective, also, in maintaining industry?
Under the circumstances there will be little temptation for people to speculate on the possibility that the scheme won't work. Literally, the eggs have been placed in one basket—the capacious basket of government control. That basket has been placed in the trusted hands of President Roosevelt. By the token of the trust his countrymen have in him there can be nothing but confidence in his ability to perform the delicate task before him.The difficulties of the process are obvious and very numerous. The significance of the fact that it is being attempted, that the whole face of economic activity and many of the cherished principles of self-government are being changed inevitably will emerge, even in the slowest wits. Though it is yet too soon to understand how far the new conception may lead the country, it is perfectly plain that old, familiar faces and ideas are disappearing with breath-taking regularity. Yet, the people are not afraid.Call it and think of it as national managerialship. To a population which has made a god of efficiency that should be the easiest way to believe that every thing is for the best. Control has been centralized in one place, from which it will be delegated to subordinates pledged to work in harmony. If it works, a new order will be born. If it doesn't,
an old one will have been destroyed.

The Threesome

HEALTH

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland
New York City

Head Warnings of Pyorrhea

It is not the disease, but neglect of the remedy which generally destroys health. This is an old Latin proverb. It can be applied to the prevention and treatment of pyorrhea.Pyorrhea is a disease of the tissues about the teeth. Gums are inflamed and lacinated with pus. In consequence toxins, poisonous substances, are given off and these are absorbed within the body. If neglected, serious and permanent damage
results, not only to the teeth, but to other parts of the body.

Dr. Copeland

Nature has a way of sending out warnings when anything is wrong with this body of ours. She runs up signals of danger. Bleeding gums is such a danger sign—it is a warning of pyorrhea. If you bite into an apple and notice blood on it, you must suspect pyorrhea. Blood on toothbrush is another one of nature's warnings.When the gums are healthy and free from pus, they are pink, strong and resistant to pressure. If the gums become red, bluish or gray, pyorrhea may be present. Do not delay if they become swollen, spongy and bleed easily upon touch.There are many causes for this annoying condition. Neglect of the hygiene of the mouth is the chief factor. Accumulation of tartar onthe teeth, faulty fillings, ill-fitting crowns and bridges, as well as lack of proper dental care, are other causes that must not be overlooked.The medical and dental professions now realize the relationship of faulty diet to diseased teeth and poor health, realizing that the condition of your teeth and mouth have much to do with it.The diet should be well balanced and contain abundant fresh fruits and vegetables. Food should be chewed slowly and carefully. Brush the teeth regularly and at least twice a day. Bear in mind that if the body is kept well nourished and the mouth clean, the gums and teeth will remain normal.

Don't Neglect the Teeth

I cannot overemphasize the importance of periodic visits to the dentist. Regular inspection will prevent unnecessary dental defects,
insure the health of your mouth,
and protect you from many constitutional disorders. X-ray examination of the teeth often reveals infection never suspected.Do not wait until Mother Nature sends you a warning sign. Help your body maintain good health by preventive measures rather than waiting until curative measures are necessary.

The Stars Say:

For Sunday, May 21

Sunday's horoscope holds augur-ies of some strange and singular adventures and experiences on this day. They are indications of subtle and peculiar things happening in both the business and the private life. It would be well to be on guard against trickery, secret attack,
and sinister doings in all the affairs.
Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year calling for all their powers of discretion and alertness against strange, peculiar and subtle occurrences and intrigues. This in both private and business affiliations. Money, possessions and reputation should be definitely safeguarded against strangers.A child born on this day may be enterprising and well endowed with talents, but may have peculiar or erratic ideas and be subject to singular adventures.Notable nativity: Glenn Curtis, aeronaut.

For Monday, May 22

Monday's astrological forecast is one read as most propitious and happy, with much stirring to enhance the pleasure, profit and grati-fication of the ambitious in all the endeavors of life. It is a time for pushing to the goal of the heart's desire in business, social, artistic, and affectional matters with assurance of attainment and signal success.Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of decided march upon the goal of the heart's desire. It is a time for forging ahead for happiness, success, achievement and recognition in both business and personal affairs.A child born on this day should be outstandingly equipped for success, happiness and achievement in all the departments of personal joy
and living.Notable nativity: Richard Grant White, author.

Services in Our Churches

FIRST BAPTIST

Lincoln and State sts. Rev. A. C. Westphal, pastor; Homer S. Taylor, organist.

Bible school at 9:45 a. m. Elwood Hammel, Supt. R. E. Odey, director of orchestra. Three hundred and forty were in attendance last Sunday. This should prove what we can do. The superintendent's report Wednesday night revealed that there has been a steady growth, month by month, for the last several years.

Morning worship at 11 o'clock. Sermon subject, "Premiums With Each Purchase." Visual evangel for the children, "Daniel in the Lion's Den." The large number of children that regularly stay for our morning services, throughout the entire session is a real incentive to loyalty on the part of the older groups. When were you at your church last?

Personal Workers League at 2:30. B. Y. P. U. at 6:30.

Men's prayer meeting at 7 o'clock. Evening service at 7:30. The Barnes sisters, evangelistic singers from Lisbon will be our guests for the evening. They will have charge of the special music, using the guitar for accompaniment. The special music planned by the orchestra will be shifted to a week later, at this service, owing to other engagements of these singers. Sermon subject will be on the series of the Ten Commandments. The third commandment will be used— "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord Thy God in vain." The subject announced is—"Is a Blue Streak the Sign of Yellow?" Those having no church home or connection are invited. Last Sunday night the auditorium was filled. Will we overwork it?

Monday night, the officers and teachers of the Bible school will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Reeves on Highland ave.

Tuesday night, the Brotherhood class will meet in their monthly social, and election of officers will be a feature.

Wednesday night, the mid week service will be held. Following the meeting there will be a joint meeting of the Missionary committee and the relief committee. If the pastor goes to the Northern Baptist convention, this meeting will be postponed for one week.

Our Lesson for this Sabbath is taken from the 12th chapter of Mark 1 verse to the 44th verse. The topic of the lesson "The Lord Jesus Christ Answers His Adversaries." We find that the leading thought that Jesus brings out in the lesson is that man in order to love God and to love man is also to fulfill all of God's commands. If you have no church home come and study this lesson with us.

Preaching at 3 p. m. and also at 7:30 p. m. Sunday evening. The Lord has been very good to us and we are surely praising Him for the members that have been coming in to these services from time to time. And we are looking forward to a regular attendance of one hundred in a very short time.

"The Church With a Welcome." Splendid attendance in both the Bible school and the morning worship hour with marked interest in each.

The evening service drew people from a radius of eighteen miles and the normal seating capacity of the church was occupied half an hour before time for the service to start.

The remainder of the crowd were practically taken care of by extra chairs while numbers were forced to stand.

The services for the coming week will also be interesting. Morning service presenting a message to stir your heart and the evening service is a noteworthy one. A message in slides and lecture will be given on the "Holy Land" showing biblical slides of all the known places of interest in that historic land. The lecture will be given by the man who took the pictures. He is a gentleman of great renown who has traveled the world. You will want to know him, hear him and see his slides of the places where Jesus walked. In addition to this, a musical number that you will like will be rendered. No charge for admission.

Can you answer this? Why don't men who hate the church move where there are none?

A little white picket fence enclosed part of the gym forming a tea garden where cards were played. The fence and doorways were covered with Hollyhocks and morning glories. THE HOME KITCHEN

By Jeanette Young Norton

PET DISHES OF FAMOUS FOLKS

The files of Chef Maurice Canus, chef of the Ritz Tower hotel, just bulge with the favorite recipes of the great and famous who make that hostelry their home when stopping in New York. And so, with the thought that you might like to try some of these dishes, I asked Chef Canus to release some of these recipes for the readers of this page. I am sure that you will enjoy preparing and serving Mary Garden's pet dish which is creamed minced sweetbread. Here is it:

The Recipe

Soak one pair of fresh white calves' sweetbreads in water for about six hours or until all traces of blood are removed. Cover with cold water and bring gently to a boil. Cook for three minutes and chill under cold water. Cut the sweetbreads in flakes and place in a pan with butter, salt and some thinly sliced mushrooms. Cover with heavy cream and boil for 20 minutes. Place on top a star cut from thin slices of tongue.

I was present recently at a luncheon given by Good Housekeeping for Arthur Train, the novelist. At the luncheon there was served Mr. Train's favorite dessert, a delicious apple charlotte apricot, an ideal sweet for luncheon or dinner, at a simple meal or the most pretentious party.

Arthur Train's Pet Dessert

Line the inside of a mold four inches square with five quarter-inch slices of fresh sandwich bread, which has been browned in butter. Peel four apples and cut lengthwise in pieces about the size of a section of an orange. Cook these in a saucepan until they are dry, but do not cook beyond the point of firmness. Add sugar, very little cinnamon and a quantity of soft raisins. Pour this into the mold and bake in a medium oven for 25 minutes. Serve with a puree of apricots which has been sweetened to taste.

When Madame Tetrazzini arrived at the Ritz Tower on her recent visit in America, minced chicken Tetrazzini was served at her first luncheon party.

Cut boiled chicken in flakes. Place butter and thinly sliced mushrooms in a pan. Add the chicken to this and sprinkle with sweet paprika. Simmer gently for a few minutes and fill with heavy cream. Boil for 20 minutes. Place sparsely buttered spaghetti in a deep dish and cover with the chicken. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese and brown in oven.

SAN LEANDRO, Cal.—C. W. Anten's admiration for a tulip bulb landed three persons in the hospital here.

Driving with his wife and family, Anten crashed into a telephone pole when he turned to drive a tulip garden by the side of the road.

WALLA WALLA, Wash.—Fifteen years ago Vincent Hurley took dispatches with great coolness through a machine gun fire-ridden section of the Meuse-Argonne.

The other night at a D. A. V. meeting he was presented with a silver star medal from the government in appreciation of his bravery.

HOME MAKING HELPS

Rugs Must Fit in Perfectly With Room and Color Scheme

There's something more to rugs than just padding out expensive Oriental or wool copies and dumping them down in any room. No matter how costly a rug is or how beautiful it may be, it must fit in perfectly with the room and its color scheme. It must link up the various colors used without dominating all or any one particular color. It must complement the particular style in which the room is done.

Match Rugs With Furniture

Bad rugs however costly, will ruin the nicest room. It can't be lived down as can a wrong chair, table or picture. If your room has plain upholstery and drapes of one color or a subtle pattern, a bright Oriental should fit into the picture perfectly. And incidentally, one or two small rugs look delightful in the living room if there is a nice parquet floor. They give the room a cozy, graceful appearance. It is best to place them at right angles to each other, or in parallel formation. They should never overlap and should be well spaced. For a dining room, a large rug is best. If you are refurnishing, decide first on your rugs. This is easier than fitting the rug to the drapes and upholstery.

The domestic copies of Orientals shown by the better shops are really excellent. They copy faithfully the colors and designs of the better known Chinese and Persian carpets. And by the way, these rugs all have their characteristics of design and color, and with this knowledge one can immediately recognize a Sarat, a Pinar, a Keima-shah or a Kashan, the most valuable of all. The Kashan, the very finest of all the Persians, has wonderful floral designs, very rounded curves and lines, multiple borders and a short velvet pile. The colorings are delicate. Saratks have medallion and floral arabesques. Rose reds and blues predominate with undertones of green and ivory. Usually a survey of the pattern will disclose exactly what you are getting.

Beautiful Colors

Kermanshah rugs invariably include the Time of Life pattern. These often a border of allegorical birds and floral medallions interlarded with floral motifs. Saratks usually feature a palm leaf or pear motif. Soft reds, old rose and blues with an ivory border are the main colors. Chinese rugs have easily recognizable motifs and designs. The pile is long-haired and all sorts of rich, luscious colors are employed such as azure blue, vermilion, jade green, deep lavender and gold.

New Is the Time to Think Of Winter Heating Problems

If the problem of heating your house has proved a troublesome one, the next few months should be utilized to remedy the trouble. Otherwise, no matter how well furnished a home may be, it cannot be properly livable. Fuel bills, too, are of major importance, as they take up a great deal of the household budget. Of course, for those of us who contemplate buying homes or building, we can start right at the beginning by consulting with the builder or with an engineer and installing the latest type of heating unit with grilles and concealed radiators set in the shallow walls beneath windows. But our problem is not with the new burners and heating units and equipment, but with getting the best out of an old heating system. Sometimes it is cheaper to install a completely new system rather than tinker with something that has proved entirely inadequate, and needing an exorbitant amount of fuel to boot.

Make the Job Easy

You should examine the new automatic firing devices. They take the misery out of the boiler room or furnace. Of course, you will understand that these devices add nothing to the actual job of heating, but are designed to keep the boiler or heater working with a minimum of attention and bother. An almost revolutionized mechanical stoker that delivers fuel to the fire at whatever rate is required to keep the resultant heat at the required temperature. All that is necessary

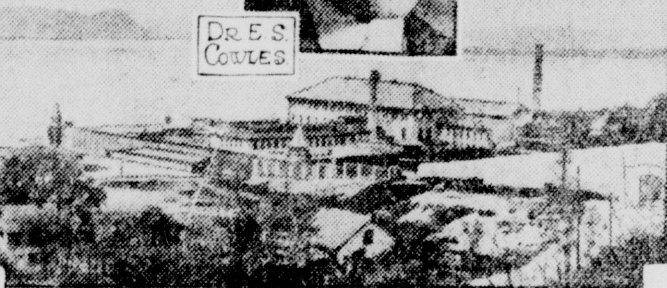

Psychiatrists Say Boy Killer Should Not Be Sent to Prison

* * * * * Education, Discipline and Scientific Control by the State Urged for Harry Murch, 16, Who Slew Playmate. Confinement with Hardened Criminals Denounced.

CELIA SING SING

DR. S. COWLES

GENERAL VIEW OF PRISON

Although the cold-blooded manner in which 16-year-old Harry Murch, of Queens, N. Y., planned and executed the slaying of 12-year-old Willie Bender, shocked all who listened to the evidence, two noted New York psychiatrists take the stand that he should not be imprisoned for the crime. To send Murch to Sing Sing to serve out a term of 20 years to life that the verdict of second degree murder makes mandatory, is, they say, to spoil his chances of mental rehabilitation. The two mental specialists, Dr. Louis Berg, attending physician at New York County Penitentiary, and Dr. Edward S. Cowles, head of the Psychiatric Foundation, place the entire blame for Murch's delinquency squarely upon the shoulders of society, and it is up to society, they believe, to try to undo what it has done. Dr. Berg asserts that outside of prison walls there would always be a chance for the youth to mend, but if he is locked up for the best years of his life with hardened criminals, he will come out of jail thoroughly warped. Dr. Cowles is of the opinion that instead of being sent to Sing Sing, young Murch should be placed under supervision, education, discipline and control, where he might be studied and treated like other deficient children. Apparently both doctors believe in the statement made at Murch's trial to the effect that the boy killer had the mentality of only a six-year-old child.

THE CHALLENGE OF LOVE

by WARWICK DEEPIING

CHAPTER FORTY-TWO

Wolfe had been gone an hour when Jess came back from the moor. She looked self-conscious and shy, but was able to smile and shake back her hair. Mary Mascall was sitting under the eaves.

"I've been waiting tea, child. John Wolfe had to get back."

Jess sat down on the grass with her arms about her knees.

"Was he —?"

"What, Jess?"

"Angry?"

"Angry! I never saw a man more pleased. I told him you were out on the moor somewhere. He told me to thank you and to say he is as proud of Turpin as — Angry, indeed!"

Jasper Turrell was in his greenhouse at Beech Hill, nosing about in his keen, mistrustful way. His long lips puckered at the sight of a cigar. Turrell never fully enjoyed the good things that belonged to him, simply because of a natural meanness and shyness of disposition. Nothing ever quite pleased him. He was forever grumbling at his gardeners, and suspecting them of selling fruit and vegetables behind his back. He made a habit of counting the peaches and nectarines on his trees, and any discrepancies had to be explained. If a friend admired his roses, he would sneer bitterly and say, "Nothing like what they should have been! I can't make these men of mine prune and syringe properly." He was forever discovering ugly tracks under the stones of life, focusing the one gap in a bid of gorgeous flowers.

"Are you there, Dad?"

The younger Turrell's figure showed through the glass, distorted slightly by crinkles in the panes.

"Hallo, Tor."

Hector Turrell's typical attitude was one of lounging self-satisfaction. He was, what many a poor devil desired to be, the ideal of impossible dreams on thirty shillings a week. Young Turrell had his fists stuffed into the pockets of his riding breeches, his black-and-white check waistcoat hunched up over them. He stood with his feet wide apart, and his lower jaw thrust out.

"I have just picked up a bit of news."

"News, eh?"

"That chap Wolfe had put up his plate in Navestock."

"Boh!"

"It's true, Young Kienis told me this morning. He's up on Peachy Hill."

Jasper Turrell's red eyelids came close together. He twisted the cigar round in his mouth.

"What the devil does he mean by that? Surely Threadgold had an agreement —"

"What about old Crabbe?"

"Crabbe?"

"He may have taken the chap up."

Turrell snarled.

This particular meeting of the Navestock Guardians was destined to be memorable by reason of its implications. Robert Flemming held his usual place as chairman in the big, padded-leather chair, his fine florid and whitening head serving the brush of the portrait painter. The room was a dull room with long, melancholy windows looking out upon a yard. Turrell sat on Flemming's right, his long legs stretched out, a sprawling figure that sneered. Little Wilks always had a fistful of papers, which he sniffed at attentively, much like a squirrel devouring a nut. Landry and Petersen, two country members, sat side by side, exchanging scandalous stories in gloating undertones.

The other members were tradesmen—heavy men who took their duties with a serious eye on personal economies. Old Crump, the clerk, leathery, pink-gilled, and sardonic, had mischievous twinkles in his porcine eyes. He turned his impertinent and abrupt nose this way and that like an old dog casting about for a scent. He was a cynic, and it delighted him to see people lose their tempers.

He had a chance that morning when it fell to him to read a certain formal letter that had been addressed to the Navestock Guardians. The letter complained of a "nuisance" in George Lane, and the writer desired to have the "nuisance" abated. The details were put with strength and savour. Crump sniffed as he read it. A familiar and penetrating odour seemed to force its way into the room.

Crump took a delight in setting people by the ears, provided it could be done delicately and without personal inconvenience. There was an uneasy scraping of feet, a tilting of chairs. Queer, slanting glances were thrown at Jasper Turrell. His fellow Guardians watched him inquisitively, but they shirked meeting Turrell's eyes.

"George Lane is it, Mr. Crump? And from Burgess the cobbler?"

"That's the signature, Mr. Flemming."

The silence was full of hesitancy. Turrell drew in his long legs, and set up with a jerk of defiance.

"I am not shy, gentlemen. It seems that someone has a quarrel with my property. Let us have it out. If anyone wishes to discuss my management of my property —"

He looked round insolently, ready to thrust a challenge under his neighbours' noses. But though Turrell was an unpopular man, he was the chief of a clan, and his fellow-clansmen knew it. It was a subtle question of self-preservation, and these men of property instantly drew together when the interests of property were threatened. A common instinct made for unanimity. Like members of a big family they might quarrel among themselves, but they rallied and drew together when one of the clan was threatened by an outsider.

Johnson the butcher, the colour of his own raw meat, spoke up gruffly from a corner.

"Mr. Chairman, seems to me, sir, Mr. Turrell's a gentleman who can be left to look after his own property. We shake along very well in Navestock. I shan't hold with mischief-making."

Turrell smiled, his long mouth crinkling curiously between his sandy whiskers. He and Johnson had a proper understanding.

Robert Flemming's eyes wandered from face to face.

"Has anyone —"

Wilks' thin and acrid voice cut in.

"It appears to me to be a vexatious complaint."

"Tss, that's the very word I was trying to think of, Mr. Wilks."

"It nails the thing to the counter, Mr. Hubbard."

"Like a bad coin, sir. I always say that things ought to be done with good feeling. I am against stirring up bad blood. The men of property in the town have public spirit."

Robert Flemming turned his head this way and that, gravely questioning Turrell lay back in his chair.

"I am quite content to leave myself in your hands, gentlemen."

"I think we can leave a gentleman of Mr. Turrell's position to control his own property."

Wilks' eyes twinkled as though he had cracked an unusually fine nut.

Turrell's half-closed eyes gleamed under their light lashes.

"You can leave the matter to me. I'll look into it, and have a proper opinion."

They had carried the question thus far, and there they dropped it. Crump was scribbling in a book. The Guardians decided that they should acknowledge the receipt of the letter, nothing more. They passed on to discuss certain items in the workhouse accounts.

From the meeting of the Board of Guardians, Jasper Turrell went straight to Dr. Threadgold's house on Mulberry Green. Threadgold was out, and Turrell was offered the urbanities of the new assistant, Mr. Talbot Tweedy. This young man wore spectacles, and had something of the look of a very wise guinea-pig. He was badly spotted with age and simpered like a nervous girl. Turrell had no use for him. He sat down and said that he would wait for Dr. Threadgold.

Turrell had to wait an hour; full time to think himself into an ugly temper. When Threadgold came in, buoyant and effusive, bumping like a cork on the froth of his own cheerfulness, the very shine of the man's face made Turrell savage.

"Look here, Threadgold, I want you to go round to George Lane."

"I will go round this evening."

"You'll find nothing to quarrel with. But I just want an opinion for ferms sake. You understand?"

Turrell went straight from Mulberry Green to George Lane. Discretion was not in him when he was angry. He never restrained himself, and his passions were emetic.

Old Burgess was at work in his shop. His bald head visible through the diamond panes of the window. The tap-tap of his hammer went on steadily. Turrell gave one stare and stood in the doorway.

"Hello, you don't like this neighbourhood, Burgess. How's that?"

The cobbler glanced up with a sulky, roundabout smile. His squatting, brawled figure with its white apron and blue shirt lacing seemed symbolical of labor crouching half rebelliously at the feet of Capital.

"You ought to know, Mr. Turrell."

An insolent slyness glimmered in Burgess's eyes, and Turrell, whose soul was sinned with insolence, understood the look, and reacted to it.

"You have been put up to it, I know that. You have made your bargain. Clear out in a month."

"I was just going to say, sir —"

"I don't want to hear what you were going to say. You have notice to quit, and that settles it. I am not going to have mischief made behind my back. I'm not the man to stand it."

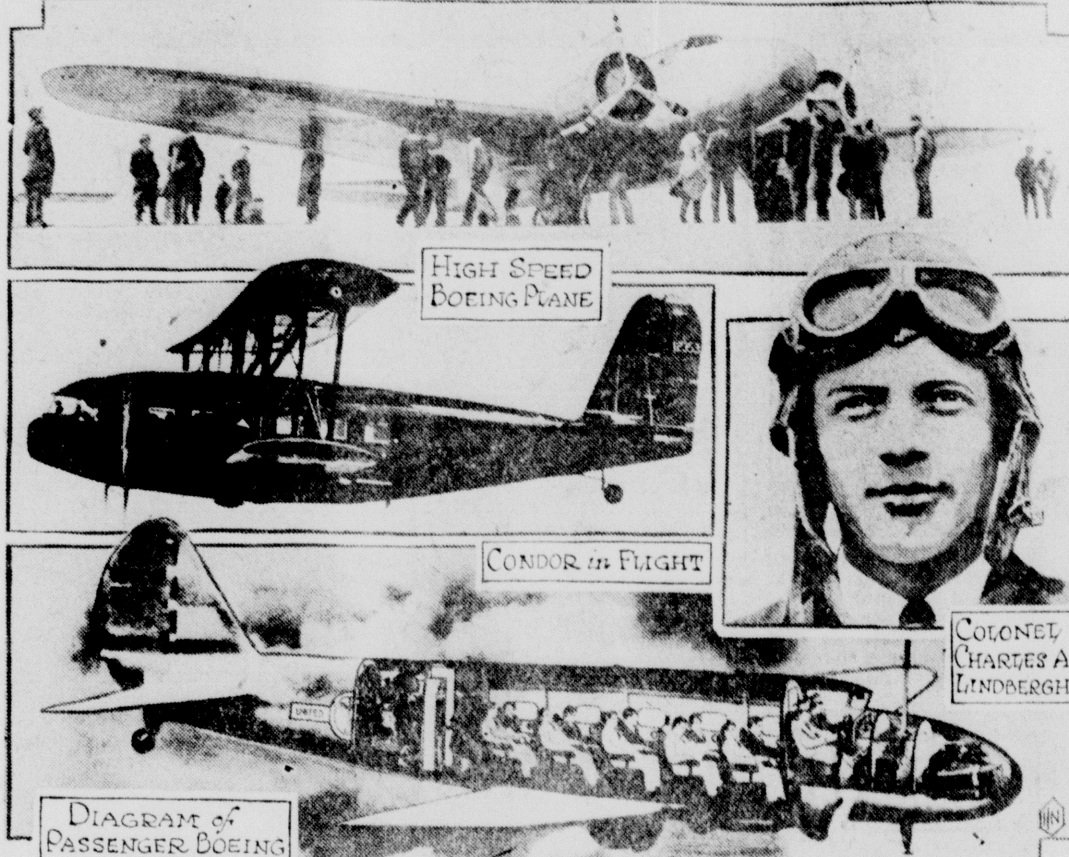

He walked on with fuming self-satisfaction.

Traveler Profits by Air Lines' Competition

New High-Speed Craft, Added by Big Air Transport Companies in Race for Supremacy, Gets You There Faster—with Greater Safety and Comfort.

In a competitive race to provide more speed in the transportation of passengers, mail and express, the nation's big airlines are acquiring new ships, which not only cut traveling time between points from 15 to 30 per cent, but carry the passenger to his destination in greater comfort and safety than ever before. All three of the big transcontinental lines have swung to the new type of high-speed craft, and in order to keep step, it is expected that the small lines will soon follow suit. Two of the new types of transport craft now in operation are the United Airways' Boeing and the American Airways' Condor, both two-motored ships. The Eastern Air Transport also favors the Condor. The Boeing is an all-metal, low-wing monoplane, powered with two 550-horse-power Wasp motors. It has a cruising speed of 165 miles an hour, and can do 182 with the throttle full open. This with its ten passengers and full cargo. The Condor, of the American Airways, is a biplane, somewhat larger than the Boeing. It is powered with two 700-horse-power Wright Cyclone motors, which propel it at a cruising speed of 150 or a wide open speed of 175 miles an hour with fifteen passengers, the crew of three and 650 pounds of cargo aboard. An idea of how time has been cut by the new planes may be gauged by the performance of the Condors to be used on the New York-Miami run by the Eastern Air Transport. The new planes can make the run to Miami from New York in 9 hours, 45 minutes, against the old 14 hours. Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, technical adviser to Transcontinental and Western Air, called the "Lindbergh Line," recently tested out two new types of plane for his company. The trend is away from the one-motored craft and towards the two-motored and single-motored plane.

Schoolboy Athletes Vie For State Titles In Columbus Meets

THE DAY IN SPORTS

OFFICIALS MUST DOLL UP SHOWMANSHIP NEEDED

THE RECENT RULING of the Western Conference that all of its track meet officials must be garbed in white trousers, dark blue coats, white shirts and blue ties shows an effort to remedy the deplorable lack of showmanship which makes track and field events uninteresting to most persons. But this measure is only a pale panacea for the widespread ailment of track contests.

The average fan will never see a Big Ten meet. He is concerned only with the procedures which will guarantee him, for the price of admission to the local county or district tourney, something more spectacular than a public playground field day.

At present meets, squads of contestants in blue, orange, purple and green jerseys make a colorful background, but the effect is always spoiled by the non-participants swarming over the scene of action in street clothes. P. T. Barnum would have known better. He would have kept all assistant officials, coaches, trainers, old grads and such like in the stands, leaving the officials and athlete the center of attraction.

He would have dressed the javelin hurlers, discus throwers and shot putters in leopard skins, cave man fashion, and put rhinestone studded batons in the hands of relay runners to flash in the sunlight as they were handed on to fresh men. Hockey, perhaps more than any other sport makes use of showmanship, a little of which would go a long way toward drawing bigger crowds in track. The hockey game sees to it that every act is done with a flair. Even between the halves the chipped ice is scraped gracefully from the rink by skating hooligans to an accompaniment of waltz melodies from the loud speakers.

THE MID-AMERICA crew race at Marietta last Saturday not only proved the superiority of the Massachusetts shelmian, but also showed that a race of landlubbers we Ohioans are.

Wherever the contest was mentioned, outside Marietta, of course everyone usually agreed he could never, never get excited over two boats rowing down a river. The Buckeye notion of a race, it seems, is a competitive trial of speed among objects on all fours—wheels or hoofs.

But there is bound to be a certain enthusiasm for crew racing if anyone who has ever closely inspected a shell. The frail, almost paper-thin craft tapering cleanly at bow and stern seems incredibly fragile to carry nine men and eight heavy oars. The "Three Wise Men" of Gotham in the nursery rhyme "Who Went to Sea in a Bowl" appear to have a stout and seaworthy boat compared to the spindle of cedar or mahogany manned by the collegians. And the wise men, if they felt playful could dabble their toes in the briny, but a crew man is laced into shoes fastened to cross supports in the floor.

A crew race lasts such a short time—less than 10 minutes for two miles' worth—that the excitement can be very intense. Furthermore, enjoying the sport is more than a matter of watching the race. The boats must be clocked with a stop watch to see how far wrong the judges' time will be—a gesture which corresponds to razzing the umpire. And strokes must be counted. A whole observation team will be made up of carloads of persons muttering under their breath the beat of each crew. No stroke can raise or lower his beat without the counting gallery being aware of it and thus subtle communication is established which makes the race a personal matter with every spectator.

Landmen may laugh, but there really are thrills in a crew race.

Kansas City Star Replaces Sigafos as Batting Leader

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, May 20—Eddie Taylor, Kansas City infielder, with a gain of 38 points during the past week, has popped up as the American association's batting leader.

Sigafos in 4th Place

The averages, which include Thursday's games, gave the blue slugger a mark of .455 and left him 44 points ahead of the next regular, Ray Thompson, of Louisville, who registered a gain of seven points. The activities of the new leader and his runner-up dropped Frank Sigafos, Indianapolis infielder, who had led most of the way, down to fourth place with .390. Sigafos dropped 53 points.

Joe Hauser made only one home but led with 10, and Phil Todd had five triples for a leadership. Sigafos continued to lead in doubles with 12. Hauser's home run helped him to a leading total base collected of 73, and Irv Jeffries headed the field in hits with 48. George Detore of Toledo, and Spencer Harris of Minneapolis, were tied for scoring honors, with 27 runs apiece. Bill Sweeney of Toledo, paced the base stealers with seven. Although well down the list in batting, Stanley Schmo of Kansas City was the leader in driving runs in with 24.

Other Leaders

Following Taylor and Thompson in the individual list of leaders were: Sweeney, Toledo, .393; Sigafos, Indianapolis, .390; Glenn, Minneapolis, .380; Doljack, Toledo, .377; Jeffries, St. Paul, .370; Mosell, Kansas City, .362; Detore, Toledo, .343; and Adair, Louisville, .336. Paul Dean and Jim Lindsey, of Columbus, each had won three pitching victories and had not been defeated. Two oldtimers, Jess Petty of Minneapolis and Americo Polli of Milwaukee had records of five victories and one defeat.

Toledo retained the team batting lead with .306, two points higher than last week, while St. Paul added a point to its fielding average and continued to lead with .977. Toledo's 30 double plays also was good for a leadership.

Tired of Selling Curios to Tourists, Tahitian Takes Up Fight Promoting

By REYNOLDS PACKARD

Special Correspondent of International News Service

PAPETE, Tahiti, May 17.—Fed up with selling wooden idols, pig tooth bracelets, cat's eye rings, seal-buckles and other South Sea curios to American tourists, a young man out here has become the Tex Rickard of the Pacific islands. He is Gus Dave Spitz, better known today as Promoter Tex Gus.

His programs with their barefooted grudge-fighters are so popular that he is now planning to enlarge his arena here. Within the next few weeks he is leaving for New Caledonia, where he will start boxing on an organized scale. The arena with which he has attached his success in Tahiti is a fenced-off sand lot into which are jammed a thousand excited fight fans once a month. Most of the thirty ringside seats and the 150 reserved seats are occupied by American residents and tourists while hundreds of laughing and shrieking natives with a good scattering of Chinese stand up all around.

The prices range from 20 cents for standing room to 60 cents for reserved seats.

"I WANT to get some American boxers here and see how the local talent will match up with them," said Promoter Tex Gus. "But those fellows in the States have got to get fancy prices out of their beans. Why, say, I don't even pay the light-heavyweight champion of French Oceania more than 30 dollars for a title bout."

"If any of those fellows from the States ever come here I'll match them with our guys and believe you me, they'll have some scrap on their hands. Our fellows don't wear any high-top shoes in the ring, but they know what the slam-bang business of the game is all about."

Promoter Gus explained that he can charge so little because he does all the work himself. He is trainer, match-maker, referee, announcer, and promoter all in one.

"And when I announce," he said with pride, "I announce in three languages—English, French and Tahitian." He also writes the advertising, paints the posters and supervises the ticket-selling.

For many years he worked among the curios in his father's shop before he ventured into the promoting business in February of 1931. Since then his programs have become more and more important until now he practically has a monopoly of boxing in the South Sea.

Odd Fish Story True
TILLAMOOK, Ore.—Here's a Paul Bunyan yarn told by Jack Moors, who swears it is true. Using clam neck for bait, Moors hooked a 12-inch kelpie. As he hauled it near the surface, a two-foot long cod snapped at the kelpie, swallowing it. Before he could land his double catch, a four-foot kelpie coiled swayed about half the length of his smaller brother. A bystander helped him gaff the triple-header. The largest fish weighed 55 pounds and was put on display in a downtown window as proof of his fish story.

DAIRY DEFEATS BILLIARDS, 4-1; CIGARS WIN, 8-1

Tobies Break Into Win Column For First Time This Year

Dale Ritchie held the foe to two hits, one a home run by Mat Engelter, and pitched the Famous Dairy to a 4-1 victory over the Schafer Billiards in a well played softball league fray at Centennial park field Friday.

Engelter's homer in the sixth robbed Ritchie of his second shut-out performance of the season.

The Dairyemen clouted Hillard for seven safeties, tallying two runs in the fifth and sixth.

The United Cigars finally stepped out and won a ball game, their first in four starts, with an 8-1 decision over the Salem Hardware.

Ralph Gregg hurled brilliantly, duplicating Ritchie's slab masterpiece, by allowing the Hardware but two safeties.

May, Kennedy and Borrelli clouted two-baggers as part of the Tobies' nine hits.

BURNS DEFEATS JACKIE HOLT IN THRILLING DUEL

Semi-Final Steals Show At Legion Slugfest Friday Night

Billy Burns, clever Cleveland slugger, pounded his way to an impressive decision victory over Jackie Holt, Canton batter, in a thrilling battle which stole all honors in an entertaining boxing show staged last night by the American Legion at the Memorial building.

A Great Battle

It was one of the best and most thrilling slugfests ever witnessed by a Salem fight audience.

Burns held a big edge over the Canton scrapper until the fifth when the latter opened a deep cut over the Cleveland's left eye then kept hammering at that damaged spot the rest of the way.

There wasn't a knockdown but plenty of action was provided every one of the eight stanzas.

The main go turned out a real fight with Ray Lytle, Barborton blonde, sending a left to the jaw of Joe Lupica, Ravenna, to win by a knockout less than two minutes after the opening gong.

Robusch Tosses Cooper

William Robusch of Salem won in the exhibition evening bout, throwing Russell Cooper of Alliance in 9 min. 20 sec.

Another Salem ringmaster, Kid O'Neil, won by a technical knockout over Freddie "Kid" Hunt of New Galilee, Pa.

The second preliminary also ended in the same way, Ed Jackson of Cleveland winning over Al Muir of Canton when the latter's seconds tossed in the towel after Jackson pummeled Muir a hard one in the mid-section and had him groggy.

Gus Schler and Neil Lorden officiated. Jim Kesselmeire was the announcer and Norm Peters the timer.

Wooster Wins

WOOSTER, Ohio, May 20.—Wooster college golfers handed Oberlin's masnie welders an 11 to 5 setback yesterday.

MULLINS STAR LEADS CLASS A BATTING FIGHT

Robert Campbell in 1st Place In Hitting With Average of .571

Robert Campbell, Mullins star third-sacker, clouting out eight hits in 14 trips to the plate, holds first place in the Class A softball league batting race with the high average of .571.

Has 71-Point Lead

Campbell, also leading in the number of base hits and tied for leadership in run-scoring with two other Mullins players, has kept above the 500 mark since the opening of the season and has a lead of 71 percentage points over his nearest rival.

George McFeely, Calkins Chicks hurler, holds the runner-up post with an even 500 while Jones (Famous Dairy), formerly tied with Campbell for first place, has dropped to third. Steve Zatzko (Chicks) and Forney (Deming) are fourth and fifth, respectively.

Joe Kelley, 1932 batting champion, is tied with Borton (Mullins) and Ted Scott (Chicks) for sixth place.

McNamee Leads Hurlers

Sharing run-scoring honors with Campbell are Jimmy Fitzpatrick and Arthur Borton. McNamee, hurling for Mullins, with four straight wins to his credit, leads the hurlers.

The batting averages, which do not include Friday games, of players with 10 or more times at bats, follow:

After Fascist Row in London

Apparently not everyone in England is at odds with the policies of Chancellor Adolf Hitler and his Nazis. Above is a scene which followed a recent fracas in London between a Jewish faction and a gathering of Sir Oswald Mosley's Fascists, who were distributing literature showing sympathy for Hitler's anti-Semitic campaign. Before police restored order a few Blackshirts had become casualties, as shown, and in inset is a Jewish woman who didn't escape unscathed.

Splendid Casts in Coming Films This Week at State

MADGE EVANS, ROBERT YOUNG and ROBERT MONTGOMERY in "HELL BELOW"

THERE'S a fine array of pictures and casts coming to the State theater this week. Just glance at this group of names—Robert Montgomery, Lionel Barrymore, Walter Huston, Irene Dunn, Charles Bickford, Madge Evans, Jimmy Durante, Lewis Stone, Phillips Holmes, Benita Hume, Robert Young, Gwili Andre, Eric Linden and last but certainly not least—Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy.

There is a varied program too, drama, excitement, comedy, romance and pathos.

"Hell Below" Coming

First there is "Hell Below" and it plays at the State three days starting Sunday. It is a sensational submarine drama with plenty of adventure and thrills. It has earned widespread comment and it is said to be the most thrilling picture ever to reach the screen.

Robert Montgomery, Walter Huston, Jimmy Durante, Madge Evans, Eugene Palette, Robert Young and David Newell make up its more than exceptional cast.

There are some striking effects achieved by under sea photography and the story is replete with engrossing action from start to finish.

One of the most popular and beloved actors of the screen, Lionel Barrymore, has the principal role in the interesting film, "Looking Forward."

The picture's title was selected by special permission of President Roosevelt.

The symbolic phrase was used by the president as the title of his recently published novel.

Barrymore is once more in a character that is gentle and loving, that of the faithful bookkeeper, Benton. The role is far distant from that which he had in "Rasputin."

Phillips Holmes, Benita Hume, Lewis Stone, Colin Clive, Elizabeth Allan and Alec B. Francis compose another excellent cast of players.

Laurel, Hardy Comedy

Friday and Saturday Laurel and Hardy, perhaps the screen's most popular comedians, will play in "The Devil's Brother" and from advance previews this should be one of the week's big hits.

Correction

In the Corso Fruit market advertisement Friday, it was announced erroneously that the liquor commission ruling was 48 bottles to a customer in 48 hours. This should have read 43 bottles in 24 hours.

Lovable Enigmas

THESE puzzles we have married! How disturbingly efficient they are. Patiently they sit across the dinner table from us and listen to our evening complaints — short-handed at the office, chief cranky, customer spoiled golf date, stenographer late, letters misfiled—women have all the best of it! Then they smile riddles.

If you could see the little woman in the morning after you leave for the office! Children to bundle off to school, meals to plan, marketing to do, laundry to send, buttons to put on, tears to mend, dozens of trips to the front and back doors, lunch, squabbles to settle, a cut finger to bandage.

At night, she meets you in a chic little gown you never saw before. Junior struts new shoes. There are new towels in the bathroom. There is an unfamiliar and delicious dish to tempt your appetite.

Where does she find time to be company purchasing agent, vice president in charge of cooking, general manager of sewing, teaching and all the rest?

The advertising columns in this paper are her greatest ally. Here is news of new ways, better ways, better things—and at savings she gloats about, but seldom mentions.
